Talk

Join us to hear Barbara Mulligan and David Cuthbert present about their book “New Zealand’s Ghost Railways”.

The book takes readers on a journey of discovery around New Zealand exploring long forgotten railway branch lines dating back to the 1870s. David will summarise the development and decline of the Branch railway network, and the rationale for selecting the lines they wrote about. Then Barbara will share some of their field research experiences in different parts of the country. The book is full of fascinating stories and facts, so the talk will make for an interesting insight into the past.

David Cuthbert is an engineering graduate of Canterbury University. His professional career included leadership of student organisations, involvement in the NGO sector, and 15 years as an Advisor to the leader of a political party. Barbara Mulligan is a historian who has served in management roles in the voluntary sector and in the government sector. As well as running guided walks of Karori Cemetery Barbara also has a keen interest in researching Wellington War Memorials, and is President of the Wellington Branch of the New Zealand Society of Genealogists.

March Speaker

Our speaker in March was Glenn Reddiex, author and Karori resident who spoke about his recent book “Just to Let You Know I Am Still Alive – Postcards from New Zealanders during the First World War”

The book is dedicated to World War One postcards mostly sent back to New Zealand by Servicemen serving stationed in Egypt, Gallipoli, France, Belgium and England. It is richly illustrated showing not just the illustration on the front, but the message written on the back, mostly to family and relatives.

It presented a fascinating glimpse into an ordinary soldier’s life and daily routine without the horror of war as this was excluded by censors.

Proposed trips for 2016

Many apologies our planned Karori architecture walk has not happened yet; minor renovations of my house turned out to be a complete rebuild, so I haven't yet found a free weekend! It will definitely go ahead, potentially in June. This will be a 1.5-2 hour walk around central Karori focusing on significant Karori buildings and homes and the architects who designed them.

We are also still looking to organise a walking tour of Karori Cemetery later in the year.
